ABOUT ME

I am a passionate software developer specializing in web applications and cross-platform mobile applications. In my projects, I focus on delivering not only user-friendly but also technology-integrated experiences, utilizing technologies such as Laravel, Strapi, Express, Next.js, React.js, and React Native. For this reason, I frequently make use of artificial intelligence and third-party tools.

We may need a lightweight database when developing simple applications. We use local database packages to avoid having to connect to any database. That's why I wanted to develop a JSON database application that works as a key-value. In this way, we can store data with keys as if creating a table in a single database file.
